

Performance Comparison between OpenLDAP and PostgreSQL

Adam Krasuski Karol Krenski
krasus@inf.sgsp.edu.pl

Abstract

In this paper the performance comparison between Directory Service and Relational Database is described. The discussion is generally focused on the comparison of the performance in data searching. Simple data loading times are also compared. The goal of the described test is to find the fastest database technology as a potential data layer for CBR system. CBR system is designed for decision support during the Rescue Action for Fire Service.